

AMAX Kicks Off Operations with Iduapriem Mine

On his part, the Project Manager for AMAX, Lambert Zormelo, expressed gratitude to the management of Iduapriem Mine for the opportunity and said the team is committed to working hard to improve loading times, truck turnaround and exchange times to help the mine to meet its production targets.

AMS and Maxmass on Saturday, 17 July 2021 officially kicked off operations with Iduapriem Mine under a joint venture named AMAX.

The joint venture is a five-year contract awarded by management of AngloGold Ashanti Iduapriem Mine as part of efforts to improve efficiency, meet production targets, and cut down costs.

Speaking during a brief ceremony at the Block 7 & 8 (Cut 2) pit to commence operations, Senior Manager - Mining, Stephen Asante Yamoah explained that AMAX is expected to help the Mine in the ongoing work to convert ore resource to reserve, help improve efficiency and increase productivity to create shared value for all stakeholders.

“Both companies are familiar with our mining operations and with the enhanced capacity and additional fleet of trucks to draw more volumes of ore, we look forward to meeting our production targets in a cost-effective manner,” said Stephen Asante Yamoah.

“We have the requisite skills and equipment to deliver this contract to the expectation of all. The standards are going to improve comparatively with enhanced supervision and pit designs,” Lambert Zormelo assured.
